Information on the RSEA A.M. One-year Degree

The one-year degree is an option for students who for a variety of reasons must complete their studies in a single academic year. Students enter the program in September, and may graduate either in May or November of the following year.

Students who are able to fulfill their language requirement, their course requirements, and their thesis within two semesters generally graduate in May; students who complete their thesis only by the end of their second semester graduate in November. Both are considered One-Year degree candidates. Regardless of which graduation date is chosen, all coursework must be completed by the end of the first academic year.

Language:
For a student who enters the program without the required language qualifications, completing within one year is very difficult. Students in this situation generally need to take 5 courses per semester or take summer language courses. It is more reasonable for these students to be November degree candidates.

Courses:
One-Year degree candidates must meet all course requirements. They should choose their courses carefully in consultation with their advisor. They must also complete the one-year degree form indicating their courses for the whole academic year.

Thesis:
May degree candidates must adhere to the regular G2 thesis schedule and requirements, including: attending three thesis workshops and submitting their thesis by the deadline.

November graduates should also attend all the thesis workshops; however, the schedule for submission is different. Students should be in consultation with their Thesis Advisor regarding the advisor's availability to read and advise their thesis after the end of the spring semester. Students should formulate a timeline under the Program Administrator's guidance.

Please see form for deadlines.
