Understanding and Promoting Forgiveness of Self and Others

Everett L. Worthington, Jr., PhD
with Katherine Kulick and Brandon J. Griffin
Virginia Commonwealth University

Abstract: After setting the topic of forgiveness within a stress-and-coping theory of forgiveness, I define crucial terms and explain concepts like the injustice gap, alternative ways to promote justice, unforgiveness, and decisional and emotional forgiveness. Then, I examine the implications for individuals’ health. I consider possibilities for public health interventions, and I report a recent meta-analysis of interventions to promote forgiveness, emphasizing the REACH Forgiveness (Worthington, 2006) stress-and-coping-based intervention model. I extend the model to successful forgiveness of the self. I conclude that intervention data—interventions with individuals, couples, groups, and communities—suggest enormous potential for making an impact on public health through promoting forgiveness.

Wednesday, April 16, 2014
12:30PM – 1:30PM
Kresge Room 201