OPEN TO HARVARD DOCTORAL STUDENTS

The Doctoral Fellowship is a competitive two-year fellowship offering exposure, training, and professional preparations for doctoral students interested in issues related to science, religion, and culture. The fellowship provides an opportunity to broaden one’s area of expertise and enhance their competitiveness and professional reach. The program provides close mentorship, scholarly training, and professional development over two years.

By the completion of the fellowship, fellows will have published a peer-reviewed article, presented their findings in the annual SRC research symposium, and created a syllabus or teaching statement.

To apply, visit http://bit.ly/src-doctoral-fellows
Review of applications begins on May 31